could join hands one day...*

ALL OF US, regardless of ethnic, racial, national origin, religion, social status, political, philosophical and ideological beliefs, share common goals and aspirations: to make life stable and dignified for every person, free from wars, violence and suffering.

We bear a shared responsibility before history – to preserve the achievements of our predecessors that we can be proud of; and a responsibility before the future – to preserve moral traditions, the ethno-cultural identity of our peoples, and to pass on social experience to future generations.
